

BIOGRAPHY

In January 2019, Barrick and Randgold merged. Bristow restructured and re-strategized Barrick, and within months he was the prime mover in the combination of the Nevada assets of Barrick and Newmont, creating the world's single largest gold mining complex, Nevada Gold Mines, majority-owned and operated by Barrick.

Bristow leads an organization with mines and projects in 18 countries, focused on long-life, high-margin gold and copper assets and containing six of the world's Tier One gold mines.

A geologist by profession – Bristow holds a doctorate in geology. His goal is to make Barrick the world's most valued gold and copper producer, owning the best assets, managed by the best people, and delivering industry leading returns.
